Ms Caroline Khamati Mugalla, the Director of the International Labor Organization Country Office for the United Republic of Tanzania, Burundi, Kenya, Rwanda, Uganda and the EAC and Mrs Edith Okoki Director General NEA

Ms Mugalla is the first and only woman currently heading a sub-regional trade union in Africa, the East Africa Trade Union Confederation. She is also a former member of the Commonwealth Civil Society Advisory Committee representing Eastern Africa and a member of the Trade Union Development Cooperation Network. With a vast experience her greatest expertise revolves around influencing development of labour and employment policy for regional integration. Her wish is to see East Africa lead in decent work against the jobless economic growth.

The International Labour Organization (ILO) has long been recognized for its global efforts in promoting labor rights, employment opportunities, social protection, and workplace justice. A collaboration between these two institutions can yield significant benefits, particularly in advancing employment. The key areas of collaboration between the ILO and NEA, include; ongoing ILO programs, efforts to build social protection floors, policy reviews, and capacity-building initiatives.

The ILO has previously supported NEA in establishing a Resource Center at its headquarters with a toll-free number (+254 020800222223), as well as the NEAMIS portal (http://www.neaims.go.ke/) ,where job seekers can apply for job opportunities advertised by employers through the portal

The ILO-NEA collaboration enhances labor market outcomes and social protection, promoting inclusive employment, decent work, poverty reduction, and social justice by aligning national policies with global standards.
